作者简介

After years of traveling, Sandra finally got tired of not having a vegetable garden and settled down in Portland, Oregon. She finally has her heirloom tomatoes, but their health is constantly compromised by her continued trips. Researching Oregon has been a highlight of Sandra's Lonely Planet career, which has spanned six years and as many countries. She's come to realize of how beautiful her home state is, how much it has to offer and how friendly people are in those tiny countryside towns in the middle of nowhere.
